Chapter 321: The Fourteenth Clone and the Chaos World

A New Mission

As the multiverse expanded under his divine dominion, Sung Jin-Woo, the Absolute One, understood the need to oversee the most chaotic and unpredictable domains: the realms under the influence of the Seven Monarchs. These realms, collectively known as the Chaos World, were filled with creatures who once thrived in war, destruction, and rebellion. Though subdued, they required guidance to ensure harmony.

Sung Jin-Woo, seated on his throne in the Umbra Citadel, extended his hand, materializing a fourteenth clone. As with the others, this clone held 0.0000000000000001% of the original body's power—a fraction that still made it a being of unparalleled might.

With a nod from the Absolute One, the clone descended into the Chaos World, tasked with the supervision and stabilization of the Seven Realms under the monarchs' rule.

The Seven Realms of Chaos

The Chaos World was divided into seven vast realms, each under the domain of a Monarch:

1. Demon Monarch – Demon Realm
A realm of infernal landscapes, filled with lava rivers and shadowed skies. The Demon Monarch ruled over a population of demonic beings whose corrupted nature made them volatile and unpredictable.

2. Beast Monarch – Beasts Realm
A realm of sprawling jungles and mountains, home to ferocious beasts and animalistic humanoids who valued strength above all.

3. Insect Monarch – Insects Realm
A hive-like realm of endless labyrinths and towering nests, where insectoid creatures thrived in their massive colonies.

4. Frost Monarch – Snowfolks Realm
A frozen wasteland of blizzards and ice palaces, populated by beings of frost and cold, who once followed the Frost Monarch's bitter path.

5. Iron Body Monarch – Monstrous Humanoids Realm
A realm of towering cliffs and harsh terrains, inhabited by powerful, monstrous humanoids with unbreakable bodies and relentless wills.

6. Monarch of Transfiguration – Demonic Spectres Realm
A haunting realm of shifting shadows and spectral horrors, where beings constantly evolved and transformed, making them unpredictable and dangerous.

7. Monarch of Beginning – Giants Realm
A land of colossal mountains and endless plains, home to giants whose sheer size and strength once threatened the balance of the multiverse.

The Creation of the Seven Emissaries

Upon arriving in the Chaos World, the fourteenth clone recognized the need for constant observation and management of each realm. To extend his influence, he created seven emissaries, each tailored to oversee one realm. These emissaries, though subservient to the clone, possessed divine power enough to command respect and loyalty from the inhabitants.

1. Emissary of Shadows (Demon Realm): A spectral being of pure darkness, capable of purifying the demonic populace while maintaining order.

2. Emissary of the Wild (Beasts Realm): A hybrid beast of unparalleled ferocity, who earned the loyalty of the wild creatures through dominance and wisdom.

3. Emissary of the Hive (Insects Realm): An insectoid queen with a divine aura, uniting the colonies under a shared purpose.

4. Emissary of Frost (Snowfolks Realm): A radiant figure of ice and snow, ensuring the frost beings stayed loyal and cooperative.

5. Emissary of Strength (Monstrous Humanoids Realm): A towering humanoid forged of divine steel, whose power rivaled even the strongest of the realm.

6. Emissary of Shifting Light (Demonic Spectres Realm): A luminous specter capable of stabilizing the chaotic transformations of the realm’s denizens.

7. Emissary of Titans (Giants Realm): A giant cloaked in divine energy, whose presence alone commanded reverence among the colossi.

The Chaos World Under Control

The emissaries spread across the Chaos World, each taking their place in the respective realms. They acted as intermediaries between the fourteenth clone and the inhabitants, ensuring Sung Jin-Woo’s divine will was carried out. The realms, once chaotic and resistant, began to stabilize under the firm yet fair supervision of the emissaries.

The fourteenth clone remained at the Nexus of Chaos, a central location connecting all seven realms, using his All-Seeing Eyes to monitor their progress. Whenever disputes or rebellions arose, the clone’s mere presence was enough to quell any unrest.

Sung Jin-Woo’s Reflection

From the Umbra Citadel, Sung Jin-Woo observed the transformation of the Chaos World. He knew that taming these realms was a crucial step in spreading his divinity across the multiverse. With the Seven Realms stabilized, the once-hostile Chaos World had become another pillar of his ever-expanding dominion.

Looking out into the infinite expanse of the multiverse, he mused:
“Even chaos has a purpose. Order and harmony are not the absence of chaos, but its evolution. Let the Seven Realms rise anew under my light.”

The Chaos World, now guided by divine order, stood as a testament to Sung Jin-Woo’s unwavering will and infinite power.
